Magellan maestro 3100 gps updates

Home > Magellan Support > Magellan Vehicle Forum I think I bricked my Magellan Maestro 3100.I purchased the 3100 used and don't know much about this GPS. The only other Magellan product I've owned was a Magellan Meridian Gold purchase new years ago. At first the Maestro 3100 wouldn't boot up but I was able to eventually get it to boot and I thought all is well I'll install it into my car and go from there.However after reading through various discussions I found people were upgrading to a new firmware and map, version 2.18. Looking at my firmware version the screen showed IIRC ver. 1.22, I forgot to write it down but was an earlier version that the latest ver.During a Google search the new upgrade patch for the firmware and maps showed up, so downloaded and proceeded to install on a laptop running Windows XP.I was following the upgrade instruction carefully but eventually ran into some problems with the upgrade software being unable to recognize the SD card installed in the Magellan Maestro 3100. I attempted to reboot and re-connect the USB cable but each time the update software could not find the SD card. I can't remember exactly what I did next but after several reformat of the SD card both from the PC and GPS unit the update still wasn't able to recognize the SD card however at some point in time I found the PC was able to recognize the SD card when installed in the 3100.I think this may when I may have bricked the 3100 as a selected "Finish" to exit the update program and remember reformatting what I thought was the SD card however I think i may have chose instead the internal drive of the 3100 as now all those files are deleted with only empty foldersEmpty folders : APP, MAP, SYS and USRWhen pressing reset or the power button upon reboot all I get is a blue screen with "Magellan" but no other menus or screens appear.The Update program now says that it's unable to find the Magellan Maestro 3100 instead of saying it unable to find the SD card. So I'm assuming It's now bricked?! did find the post > Steps to unbrick your Magellan Maestro 3100 I'm thinking of trying to closely follow his instructions how to unbrick.I'm not certain why the Maestro 3100 wasn't able to recognize the SD card as it was recognized by the PC either with a SD card reader or when installed in the Maestro 3100 : Top It looks like you're new here. Submitted by drink on Wed, 2010-08-11 08:10. At the Santa Cruz Flea Market I got, among other things, a Magellan Maestro 4050. I already have a slightly later unit, but this one has bluetooth. SO MAKE A FULL BACKUP BEFORE YOU DO ANYTHING WEIRD TO YOUR GPS. I think it is safe to say that most of techniques that have been discovered and shared in the past few weeks do work across entire Magellan Maestro line (the one with blue background and pretty icons). With that in mind, I believe it is time to change name of the thread to "Unlocking Magellan Maestro series". This way we can cover more ground, to hack Magellan GPS systems in this article. Why Hack a GPS Unit? Your Magellan GPS device helps you find directions based on your current location. But, these units were only designed to obtain directions. They are not very customizable, and you can't play media files on them. But, you can add additional features if you hack your GPS unit.
